A couple of small things.

The journey time markers on your drawings are in slightly different places to the actual journey time markers – see attached for the locations.

I am happy with the comments, but I don't feel comfortable quoting the journey times to the second. If you can present the journey times in 30 second bandings, this would be much more in line with the level of confidence that we have in the accuracy of the models. We don't like to quote to the second, because we don't have confidence that the journey time is exactly XY seconds, etc.

Hope this makes sense, let's catch-up next week.

Many thanks

Adam
