Thanks Dan, I understand and we're happy to go through these with you. These are items for public consultation. We are not saying they are good ideas. If we didn't consult on the full range of options the black cab trade would be livid. So it is a public consultation and no decisions made. To have omitted them would not have cleared down all the issues festering out there.

To be honest, as TfL does the kind of insane and luddite things you're consulting on for private hire vehicles I can't really see much point in discussing innovation and technology with you.

Dear Dan

I hope you're well. I wondered whether you would have time on Monday afternoon/evening in Manchester for a catch-up with Vernon and I to discuss some of our work on developing our ticketing (eg contactless) and customer service offer and how it could be replicated elsewhere in the UK.

Best wishes

Thanks for your time yesterday, much appreciated. We'll get some material on a simple plan for a national ticketing system realisable in 2-3 years and not the decades in DfT plans. I'll also set up a meeting for you with our Commercial Director on what our retail offer looks like and how it could be replicated.

Hope you had/have a safe trip back from Birmingham.

Daniel

Thanks for your email to Kit, which he forwarded on to me. I look after transport for the Mayor.

We are aware of Uber and Garrett (the TFL Surface COO, cc'd above) and I meet the cab and minicab trades regularly. Clearly we want to be helpful; the issue is a bit more complex than it might appear bc of the way taxi and private hire licensing works in London

I think Garrett is probably best placed to explain where we have gotten to with Uber to date, and what the plan is - however as I say we are all keen to find a way forward that works for everyone

Garrett, perhaps we can discuss at this week's Surface 121, thanks

As we discussed, I think the answer lies in one or several of the following:

- A congestion charge
- A new kind of licence for PVH
- A green cap i.e. licenses above a certain number will only be granted to electric vehicles
- Big push on Ride-sharing
- Some kind of division between inner/outer London

Can officials please work up details on these for discussion

As discussed, we will convene a detailed discussion around the options we talked about (and any others that emerge) with officials accompanying as well

Julian can you let us know who the lead official is on your side so Helen can liaise with them

Daniel if there is anyone else you want us to involve pls let me know

Roxanne, we need a meeting for the above "To" list (plus whoever Daniel and Julian nominate) for the first week of November. Happy to be flexible on location for that if it helps at all.

Helen, will you work with your colleagues + DFT to put some materials/ options together for that meeting and make sure I see them the week before

Mark/Lisa pls can we discuss at Thurs Surface 121 so I can set out the direction of travel needed

Thanks all

Isabel
